

Coronado's army had finally defeated the inhabitants of Cibola, and the Cibolans had fled. Afterward, they had agreed to meet with Coronado. The Spanish and the Cibolans had exchanged gifts and made peace.

Directions:

Answer the following questions in one paragraph each:

- How are these two passages about the Battle of Hawikuh different?
- Which account seems more accurate to you, and why?
- Why do you think these authors chose to tell the story in different ways?

They are different because the first paragraph they are tell about the battle of Hawikuh and the other paragraph is about like how Coronado's men did not find what they were looking for and how they sadel it like gifting Coronado food and gifts, made peace.

the first accurate make's more cent's to my case it's the real story to it and in the second one the person on wrotted did ed No wat was going on at that time and rih I didn't make no cent to me but the first one made a lot of pennies.

they praded Here the story in a diffent way on a diffent web sit.
